The basics of what is an HDTV or High-Definition Television are becoming less and less of an issue. With the development of Blu-Ray HD players and over-the-top high definition streaming, HDTVs are the norm, not the exception. But, what really matters, is the HDTV you choose for your home. When choosing an HDTV for your home, there are a few things to consider. Sharp Vs. Samsung: TV manufacturers come in all shapes and sizes. A new HDTV manufacturer is beginning to push itself out in the market. We are beginning to see Sharp and Samsung compete as they are priced about the same. That being said, it would be best to look for an HDTV manufacturer that offers a premium product. The difference between an HDTV made by Sharp or Samsung and a top-quality HDTV made by a premium HDTV manufacturer is dramatic. Sharp vs. Samsung: Setting up an HDTV is one of the most daunting tasks to most people. There are many manufacturers of HDTVs and options to choose from. It's a good idea to research the various options available to you. You can compare HDTVs, specs and various features when looking online at TV sites such as HDTVWorld. The type of HDTV you will buy will depend on your lifestyle. If you have a large screen HDTV and are interested in a high definition sound experience, look for an HDTV that has excellent high definition sound quality. If you have children or like to watch movies, then you will probably want a TV that is relatively easy to set up and features a simpler control panel. When looking for a new HDTV, we recommend
